7. If they refuse the commission, they are offered long-term contracts as civilian employees of the military department. As such they receive all the privileges of officers but their total pay is about 15 percent less. However, not many sportsmen like to accept either the commission or the contract as they feel that there is too much control in the military service and that their friends might look at them as "drones".
8. The members of military sport units are subject to political schooling as follows: Every weekday morning they receive 15 minutes of so-called "aktuality" (current events), when the political officer reads the newspaper and adds a few comments of his own. Every Tuesday and Friday from 2 to 5 p.m. they are given a political indoctrination lecture by the political officer. The program consists of a 30-minute reading from a book on Marxism or some similar subject, followed by a 30-minute analysis by the political officer. Then follows a 30-minute talk by one of the class on a political subject he has studied, and the rest of the time is used for discussion and so-called "criticism".
9. The Air Force sport unit "Kridla Vlasti" is organized as follows: Lt. Col. Vratislav Bajer is the officer responsible for sport activities at the Air Force H Q. in Prague. Capt. Vladimir Machacek is the commanding officer of the unit in Olomouc. Capt. Cejkal (fnu), a graduate of Haken's Political School, is a deputy commanding officer of the unit. 1st Lt. Pitner (fnu) is the officer in charge of training. The unit has four training platoons: soccer, ice hockey, volley ball, and callisthenics and gymnastics.
